

ABSTRACT

A content output device that includes a media player unit adapted to access content items from a first media source and to provide an output corresponding to the content items. The media player unit is further adapted to access at least one content item from at least one second media source and to provide an output corresponding to the at least one content item in a case an output corresponding to the content items from the first media source is requested and not possible or disrupted.